REPLY TO ATTENTION OF:

11 June 1982

Honorable William J. Casey
Director of Central Intelligence
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Mr. Casey:

[redacted] has been assigned to The National War College for the past year and has far exceeded the high work standards set for him.

STAT

As teacher and adviser on intelligence matters, [redacted] major duties were several. He conducted a highly successful course on Intelligence and the National Security Process. This required that he update and redraft the syllabus, arrange for guest speakers, preside over class sessions, provide teaching continuity to an otherwise kaleidoscopic series of lectures and seminars, and assure that the myriad details of conducting such a course went without a hitch. The course was one of the most successful of those offered and was taken by more than half of the students of The National War College. Not only was the course a vital subject, it also was taught in a manner that was intellectually demanding and satisfying.

STAT

[redacted] teaching skills were tested as well when he was called on to lead one of the twelve seminar groups studying international aspects of national security policy formulation (the international state system generally and the major players, in particular). Although initially unfamiliar with the course, [redacted] applied his broad educational background, his first hand experience, and his abilities as a teacher to make his seminar stimulating and highly informative.

STAT

[redacted] effective working relations with his students were demonstrated as well in his leadership of the field study group which went to Venezuela, Panama, Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico. His first hand knowledge of Central America greatly enriched what would normally be a memorable and eye-opening experience.

STAT

T-112

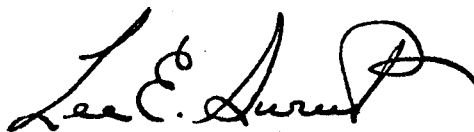

[ ] regional and professional knowledge have been called on frequently, and he has participated in several professional conferences. He has performed well as the permanent faculty advisor to four students, a duty which required that he counsel them on their studies and evaluate and document their performance.

STAT

In all the areas cited, [ ] has put in a highly productive year at The National War College. He has made a major contribution and proved to be both dedicated and capable at teaching. The National War College is very pleased to be able to count on his services for the coming year.
